

MORNING APPEAL

FRIDAY.....JUNE 17

SENATOR WILLIAMS BACK.

Senator Williams is back from Minneapolis. He said: "I never realized how small Nevada was until I reached Minneapolis. Some of the Eastern States have delegations almost as large as our State Conventions and they pay very little attention to us."

"We all felt lost. The silver sentiment in the East is mostly against silver, but the people are being gradually educated to think on the subject."

"On the trains we met men denouncing the 'dishonest dollar,' as they called it. Well, we talked silver to these people, and in most instances made them admit they were wrong and turned them our way. Most of them are open to a reasoning argument, and frankly admit they are mistaken when the facts are properly presented."

"People here are better informed on most subjects than the general run you meet there. They don't pay so much attention to public matters. Yes, there is no doubt that there is a strong feeling against Reid among the laboring classes and typographical unions."

"Harrison is regarded, however, as a better silver man than Cleveland. If a third party candidate were put up he might carry two States—Nevada and Colorado. But I believe that on election day men will get back into the old party lines. We were for Blaine, and made as good a fight for him as we knew how, and as good a fight for silver. But just imagine three votes in a crowd of over a thousand."

A Good Cartoon.

The Rocky Mountain News has a great cartoon entitled "Marching From the Battle Field." On one side are the Southern delegates carrying a banner with a picture of Harrison and his hat inscribed "The Solid South" and another banner inscribed "Down with Free Coinage." Pinchback and Powell Clayton are leading a crowd of negroes and Southern delegates. On the other side is a column of Northern States headed by Stewart, Teller and Walcott with the silver banner dragged in the dust and their heads down, a defeated and dejected crowd.

The pettiness of high officialdom is well illustrated in the dispatch from Vienna which says that in the coming to that city of Prince Bismark to attend the wedding of his son, the Vienna court will avoid noticing his presence, and that the German embassy will confine its notice of him to "the most conventional formalities." Here is a man who towers by the majesty of his mind and the mightiness of his deeds high above any other living man of the German nationality or affiliation; on the other hand here are a lot of officials so insignificant that the telegraph doesn't even give the names of them; and yet they are supposed to be able to administer a snub to that illustrious Prince of his nation and of man. Surely the irony of fate could go no further than this. If the names of these flunkies are ever recorded on the pages of history it will be not because they were able to snub the great Bismark.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Senator Stewart says that notwithstanding the late apparently favorable reports from Europe in regard to the proposed monetary conference, he had not much hope that the final outcome will be such as to bring the silver situation of the country out of its present depressed condition. He insists that the solution of the question is for America to act independently, adopt free coinage and thus force action on the other nations.

Members of Silver (?) clubs who do not care to "assume the responsibility" of meeting in State Convention, so as to get matters in order to make an aggressive fight, might as well be spotted now as later on. We have more respect for an out and out gold bug than for a mugwump.—Silver State.

Hon. Thomas Wren of Eureka, M. S. Bonfield of Humboldt, W. O. H. Martin of Washoe, General J. E. Jones of Carson, D. B. Lyman of Virginia City and W. J. Westerfield of Lyon are among the names suggested for Presidential electors on the Silver ticket.
